

Pat brings over twenty-five years of professional public/private sector experience to Jackson/Clark Partners in a various disciplines including systems development for data collection and analysis, strategic and business planning, partnership building and constituency base engagement initiatives. His professional network continues to add value to all clients and organizations. His working experience with key regional and local elected officials, policy makers and program officers enhances Jackson/Clark's planning resources.

Prior to Jackson/Clark, Pat spent seven years with General Nutrition Centers, where, serving as director of real estate systems and analysis, he focused on store development and expansion targeting. Pat's expertise in market analysis and systems grew out of his work in directing store-expansion planning efforts that saw GNC grow from 2,000 to 5,000 stores in a little over five years, and in developing the company's first networked computer system.

His range of skills includes previous work in Washington, DC and New York, NY for media, production and talent companies including the international video program marketing firm Adler Video Marketing, and the Hip Hop artist management organization Idol Makers Management.

He currently serves on boards including NeighborWorks Southwestern Pennsylvania and Keystone Progress Education Fund. In 2002 he developed the Guyasuta Fellowship Program, a policy forum and leadership development program for young leader, developed for then City Councilman Bill Peduto.

Pat resides in Friendship with his wife.
